NEW DIVISION OF ATHLETIC UNION

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 19.—Amalgamation of Minnesota and North and South Dakota into a new territorial division of the Amateur Athletic union is favored by Everett C. Brown, former president of the union, who returned yesterday from the annual meeting of that organization in New York. He answered yesterday that his plan will be submitted to a mail vote of the union at an early date. Under present arrangements Minnesota is a part of the Central Association and North and South Dakota are included in the Western association. This division has worked as a handicap to athletic competition in those states, said Mr. Brown. Another innovation suggested by Mr. Brown and to be voted upon, will be the abolition of registration fees for West Point and Annapolis students. He believes such a plan would increase interest among the athletes of the two national schools, resulting in their ultimate selection on Olympic teams.

PINCHOT URGES STERN METHODS

Now Is Time to Fight Monopolistic Control of Water Power.

GREAT DANGER AHEAD

Private Monopolization of Any Necessity Means Private Control of People.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 19.—Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, leading champion of government control of water power rights, scored in the national Conservation congress today when he succeeded in forcing before the convention the minority report of the committee on water power rights.

With former Secretary of the Interior Walter L. Fisher in the chair, for Secretary of War Stimson, who joined with Mr. Pinchot in the minority report yesterday, moved for a suspension of the rules that the water power question might be discussed from the floor. Scores of delegates who favor the majority report, which would combine national with state control with less restriction on water power grants, protested. Mr. Fisher ruled that the motion to suspend the rules was not debatable, and it was carried amid loud cheers.

Minority Report Read. Mr. Pinchot read the minority report and thereby opened the general debate.

Senator Burton of Ohio, championed the policy of strict national control of all water power rights and urged the delegates not to get into an "unseemly squabble between state rights and national control."

"It is impossible," said Senator Burton, "that state control should adequately solve this great national problem. In this matter we are conducting no crusade against capital, but there must be a recognition of the danger of monopoly and a desire to provide for public welfare in the use of this great national asset."

Washington, D. C., Nov. 19.—With the declaration that the water power of the United States was rapidly passing under monopolistic control, Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the government, told delegates to the National Conservation congress today that stern methods must be adopted to offset the tendency. His address was accepted by some of the delegates as a defiance to those who are said to seek the loosening of federal control and an extension of the regulatory powers of the individual states. "If the public rights cannot be recognized without conflict," said Mr. Pinchot, with emphasis, "then we shall have to fight, and if we have to fight, now is the time."

Henry S. Graves, head of the United States forest service, and E. A. Sterling, director of the American Forestry association, also were on the program. Each discussed the national forests and methods for their protection.

Safeguard of Water Power. Mr. Pinchot declared that the development of power under proper safeguard will be "the greatest necessity in the whole water power situation." "In the last seven years," he continued, "the concentration of control in the ten greatest groups has increased about seven times faster than the total of all water power development in the United States. Commercial power to this degree is political power and there lies the greatest danger."

"It is argued that concentration of water power control is increasing faster than power development because high risks and low returns keep capital away. But, according to the figures published by one of the ten greatest groups, in the last ten years the net earnings of the gas and electric companies of the United States have never dropped below 8 per cent as against 425 per cent for railroads and 779 per cent for individual corporations."

Control of Mechanical Power. "The control of any source of mechanical power—coal, oil, natural gas, water—carries with it control over the industries which require the power, as the rapidly increasing domination of water interests over electric lights and street railway companies well illustrates."

"Under these circumstances, we find that the control of the water power business, like the control of the oil business, the meat business, and the anthracite coal business, is passing into a few strong hands."

Necessities of Life. "Like coal, meat and oil, mechanical power from falling water is a necessity to modern life. Control over a necessity of life is control over the people who must have that necessity. Private monopolization of any necessity of life means private control over the people without responsibility to the people. It means also the power to increase the cost of the necessities of life, and therefore the cost of living."

Mr. Pinchot concluded with a denial of the assertion that full and complete regulation of water powers would check their development.

Chief Forester Graves dwelt on the activities of the forest service, detailing the assistance being given through it to settlers, stockmen and others, while at the same time conserving the nation's assets. He said the work could be made even more efficient if the states should "let the federal government assume its full responsibility of leadership."

Mr. Sterling told of the strides being made in the art of private forestry in the United States.

Hecker and Boots being tried behind the regular line yesterday. Captain Benny Hoge was moved back to his old position at left end. The regulars showed considerable strength of the offense.
